utilizing the isolated semicircular canal of the frog I was able to show that cell activity in the horizontal semicircular canal has the opposite polarity to that in the vertical canals which was the first physiological proof of Ewald's law. Several transmitting electron microscope TEM studies had already reported on the morphology of the semicircular canal cristae however my morphological work was motivated by a strong desire to see whether the morphological polarity accorded to the physiological polarity. In 1968 I happened to see the paper written by Dr David Lim one of my close friends. His findings concerning the vestibular morphology when examined by scanning electron microscopy SEM fascinated me a great deal because of the three dimensional quality of the micrographs. This stimulated me to become involved in vestibular morphology. In the beginning however I faced many problems with specimen preparation for SEM and the first few years were spent simply solving technical problems especially those of artifacts. Many of the figures in this book have been photographed with a JEOL JSM U 3 scanning electron microscope over a decade. The sharpness of these pictures still I think bears comparison to the definition of those taken by the more sophisticated SEM scopes currently available.

Development of the Inner Ear
Matthew Kelley, Doris Wu, Richard R. Fay, 2006-03-04. The Springer Handbook of Auditory Research presents a series of comprehensive and synthetic reviews of the fundamental topics in modern auditory research. The volumes are aimed at all individuals with interests in hearing research including advanced graduate students, postdoctoral researchers and clinical investigators. The volumes are intended to introduce new investigators to important aspects of hearing science and to help established investigators to better understand the fundamental theories and data in the field of hearing that they may not normally follow closely. Each volume presents a particular topic comprehensively and each serves as a synthetic overview and guide to the literature. As such the chapters present neither exhaustive data reviews nor original research that has not yet appeared in peer reviewed journals. The volumes focus on topics that have developed a solid data and conceptual foundation rather than on those for which a literature is only beginning to develop. New research areas will be covered on a timely basis in the series as they begin to mature. Each volume in the series consists of a few substantial chapters on a particular topic. In some cases the topics will be ones of traditional interest for which there is a substantial body of data and theory such as auditory neuroanatomy Vol 1 and neurophysiology Vol 2. Other volumes in the series deal with topics that have begun to mature more recently such as development, plasticity and computational models of neural processing. In many cases the series is joined by an editor having special expertise in the topic of the volume.
