documents the multifarious ways in which relationships end. She argues that if modern love was once marked by the freedom to enter sexual and emotional bonds according to one's will and choice, contemporary love has now become characterized by practices of non-choice, the freedom to withdraw from relationships. Illouz dubs this process by which relationships fade, evaporate, dissolve, and break down "unloving." While sociology has classically focused on the formation of social bonds, The End of Love makes a powerful case for studying why and how social bonds collapse and dissolve. Particularly striking is the role that capitalism plays in practices of non-choice and unloving. The unmaking of social bonds, she argues, is connected to contemporary capitalism, which is characterized by practices of non-commitment and non-choice practices that enable the quick withdrawal from a transaction and the quick realignment of prices and the breaking of loyalties. Unloving and non-choice have in turn a profound impact on society and economics as they explain why people may be having fewer children, increasingly living alone, and having less sex. The End of Love presents a profound and original analysis of the effects of capitalism and consumer culture on personal relationships and of what the dissolution of personal relationships means for capitalism.

A Nation of Wimps Hara Estroff Marano, 2008. Wake up America: We're raising a nation of wimps. Hara Marano, editor at large and the former editor in chief of Psychology Today, has been watching a disturbing trend: kids are growing up to be wimps. They can't make their own decisions, cope with anxiety, or handle difficult emotions without going off the deep end. Teens lack leadership skills. College students engage in deadly binge drinking. Graduates can't even negotiate their own salaries without bringing mom or dad in for a consult. Why? Because hothouse parents raise teacup children: brittle and breakable instead of strong and resilient. This crisis threatens to destroy the fabric of our society, to undermine both our democracy and economy. Without future leaders or daring innovators, where will we go? So what can be done? Kids would play in the street until their mothers hailed them for supper, and unless a child was called into the principal's office, parents and teachers met only at organized conferences. Nowadays, parents are involved in every aspect of their children's lives, even going so far as using technology to monitor what their kids eat for lunch at school and accompanying their grown children on job interviews. What is going on? Hothouse parenting has hit the mainstream with disastrous effects. Parents are going to ludicrous lengths to take the lumps and bumps out of life for their children, but the net effect of parental hyperconcern and scrutiny is to make kids more fragile. When the real world isn't the discomfort-free zone kids are accustomed to, they break down in myriad ways. Why is it that those who want only the best for their kids wind up bringing out the worst in them? There is a mental health crisis on college campuses these days, with alarming numbers of students engaging in self-destructive behaviors like binge drinking and cutting, or disconnecting through depression. A Nation of Wimps is the first book to connect the dots between overparenting and the social crisis of the young. Psychology expert Hara Marano reveals how parental overinvolvement hinders a child's development socially, emotionally, and neurologically. Children become overreactive to stress because they were never free to discover what makes them happy in the first place. Through countless hours of painstaking research and interviews Hara Marano focuses on the whys and how of this crisis and then turns to what we can do about it in this thought provoking and groundbreaking book Positive Psychology William C. New Laws of Robotics Frank Pasquale,2020-10-27 AI is poised to disrupt our work and our lives We can harness these technologies rather than fall captive to them but only through wise regulation Too many CEOs tell a simple story about the future of work if a machine can do what you do your job will be automated They envision everyone from doctors to soldiers rendered superfluous by ever more powerful AI They offer stark alternatives make robots or be replaced by them Another story is possible In virtually every walk of life robotic systems can make labor more valuable not less Frank Pasquale tells the story of nurses teachers designers and others who partner with technologists rather than meekly serving as data sources for their computerized replacements This cooperation reveals the kind of technological advance that could bring us all better health care education and more while maintaining meaningful work These partnerships also show how law and regulation can promote prosperity for all rather than a zero sum race of humans against machines How far should AI be entrusted to assume tasks once performed by humans What is gained and lost when it does What is the optimal mix of robotic and human interaction New Laws of Robotics makes the case that policymakers must not allow corporations or engineers to answer these questions alone The kind of automation we get and who it benefits will depend on myriad small decisions about how to develop AI Pasquale proposes ways to democratize that decision making rather than centralize it in unaccountable firms Sober yet optimistic New Laws of Robotics offers an inspiring vision of technological progress in which human capacities and expertise are the irreplaceable center of an inclusive economy
